* The September 10th game between Colorado and California was previously scheduled as a non-conference game, prior to Colorado moving from the Big 12 to the Pac-12. The formula that was devised to create the 2011 Pac-12 conference schedule did not include a game between the Bears and Buffalos. It was decided that the game would be played as scheduled, but the results would not count in the Pac-12 standings OR count as a non-conference game.

This is rare but it is not unprecedented. In 1980 and 1981 Alabama and Ole Miss wanted to continue to play each other but it was not part of the SEC's 6 game conference schedule rotation those two years. They went ahead and scheduled a home-and-home series anyway with the knowledge that those games would not count in the SEC standings during those two seasons. Those games were not considered to be conference games OR non-conference games.

GEOGRAPHY OF DIVISION I FBS COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Research tells us that about ¼ of the United States population, or between 75 and 80 million people, follow college football regularly. But which teams do they align themselves with? Nate Silver of The New York Times did a survey to see which schools had the largest number of “loyal” fans among the 120 Division I FBS schools using a tool called the CommonCensus, Sports Map Project, an online survey that asked fans to pick which college football team they’re most loyal to as well as to enter their geographic coordinates. After having collected more than 30,000 responses over the past several years, this has allowed the CommonCensus folks to divide the country up between the different college teams into what looks like a Jackson Pollock painting. The CommonCensus data also allows you to zoom in on any particular region, and develop an estimate of how fan loyalties are divided in any particular part of the country.

This survey is not quite scientific. The New York Times adjusted the results based on a comparison to the college football revenues received by each team, according to disclosure data filed with the federal government. Teams that had a significantly higher or lower than expected number of fans in the CommonCensus results in comparison to their revenues had their results adjusted accordingly. Nevertheless, this allowed The New York Times to develop an estimate of how many fans there are for each team — and where they are located.

The results of the survey are listed below. These numbers represent a general estimate and are not factual.

NCAA DIVISION I FBS CONFERENCES NON-CONFERENCE RECORDS IN THE BCS ERA (1998-2010)

Below we list the year-by-year non-conference records of the 11 current NCAA Division I Football Bowl Subdivision conferences from the beginning of the BCS era (1998 - 2010). The numbers represent all games vs non-conference opponents (including bowl game results). These numbers use actual conference affiliation for the conferences each season. The Mountain West Conference was founded prior to the 1999 season and the Sun Belt Conference began sponsoring football in 2001.
